A Heartwarming and Inspirational Sweet and Clean Western Romance

Can a tragedy-stricken young woman finally find the new start she needs and the family she's always wanted?

Elizabeth Winn is a girl who has known hurt. The Civil War took her family and her husband, and now she is a stranger in her uncle's home. What's worse, her uncle's older friends are viewing her as marriageable material.

Desperate to start a new life away from the pain of her past, she writes to The Western Times to offer herself as a bride, and connects with New Mexico rancher Cal Summers, who lives on the mesa north of Taos, running cattle and taking care of his widowed sister. After a series of swapped telegrams and letters with Cal, Elizabeth finds herself on the train west, nervous but excited for a fresh start with a new husband. But when Elizabeth arrives, she finds that the newspaper has promised her to another Taos man—mayor Aaron Stump, who lives in a fine house in town and is intent on a pretty eastern bride.

After the two men come to blows over her, Elizabeth must find a way to choose which life—and which man—will provide the happy future that she yearns for.

A story of hope, fear, new beginnings and true love.

This is a sweet and clean Western romance and is a stand alone story.
