Community and Home Health Nursing (Lippincott's Review Series) Judith Ann Allender, Allender
Prepare your students for the real world of nursing! Divided into two sections, this exceptional review book provides complete coverage of both community and home health. Utilizing a parallel structure, the text places detailed focus on the most important aspects of each. Special sections regarding cultural considerations, quality management in community health services, substance abusing populations, disasters, violence and special populations bring readers to the forefront of what's happening in healthcare today. Each and every chapter offers a bibliography, study questions, and answer key with rationale for correct and incorrect answers. A comprehensive test and answer key at the back of the book allows students to assess their knowledge and prepare for certification examinations
