The Complete Poetical Works of George Eliot: Containing the Legend of Jubal. Other Poems, Old and New. The Spanish Gypsy. George Eliot

When Cain was driven from Jehovah's land He wandered eastward, seeking some far strand Ruled by kind gods who asked no offerings Save pure field-fruits, as aromatic things, To feed the subtler sense of frames divine That lived on fragrance for their food and wine: Wild joyous gods, who winked at faults and folly. And could be pitiful and melancholy. He never had a doubt that such gods were; He looked within, and saw them mirrored there. Some think he came at last to Tartary, And some to India; but, howsoever it be, His staff he planted where sweet waters ran, And in that home of Cain the Arts began. Man's life was spacious in the early world: It paused, like some slow ship with sail unfurled Waiting in seas by scarce a wavelet curled; Beheld the slow star-paces of the skies, And grew from strength to strength through centuries; Saw infant trees fill out their giant limbs. And heard a thousand times sweet birds' marriage hymns.
